

Proposed Uxbridge Urban Provincial Park

PARK ENVIRONMENT

The proposed lands are made up of mainly deciduous forest and conifer plantation with some areas of provincially significant wetlands and sand barrens.

The area is important for connecting wildlife habitat and supports several species at risk.

We are collecting new information about the area's natural environment, such as inventorying its plant communities, invasive species, species at risk, and other special features.

Indigenous Communities

- Located within the traditional territories of First Nation Communities.
- We will continue to engage with Indigenous communities to document their relationship with these lands, including any historic or current use of this proposed new provincial park.
